From the school of instruction in the Park. Ninth Regiment Armory eighty-seven new policemen marched to-day to Police Headquarters. They had been ordered there to get their shields from Col. Kipp, the Chief Clerk of the Department. They were a proud, soldierly looking body of men, mostly young men. Their uniforms, just from the tailor's hands, were spick and span. They belonged in the last batch of the 600 men that have been taken on the force by Comn.issioner Bingham.

As they filed in the door on the Muiberry street side of the building the men were directed to go to the trialroom. There the names of thirty of the eighty-seven were read out with the announcement that these thirty had been rejected on the general ground of "physical disability." No further ex-planation was offered. The remaining fifty-seven were told to get their shields and report for duty at various station
